Total Transactions	Total Revenue	Avg Items / Order	Peak Sales Hour

- Revenue nearly doubled from Jan (R81.7k) to Jun (R166.5k) — a clear upward growth trend over the 6-month period.
- Coffee is the top revenue category at R269,952 (39%), followed by Tea at R196,406 (28%). Together they drive 67% of total revenue.
- Morning hours (5am–11am) generate 55% of all revenue (R388k). The 10am slot is the busiest single hour across all three stores.
- All three locations perform within a tight R6k revenue band — Hell's Kitchen leads at R236.5k, Lower Manhattan trails slightly at R230k.
- Mid-range products (R3–R4.99) dominate volume at 132,247 units sold. Premium R7+ items move only 4,183 units — a potential upsell opportunity.

Pricing & Customer Behaviour

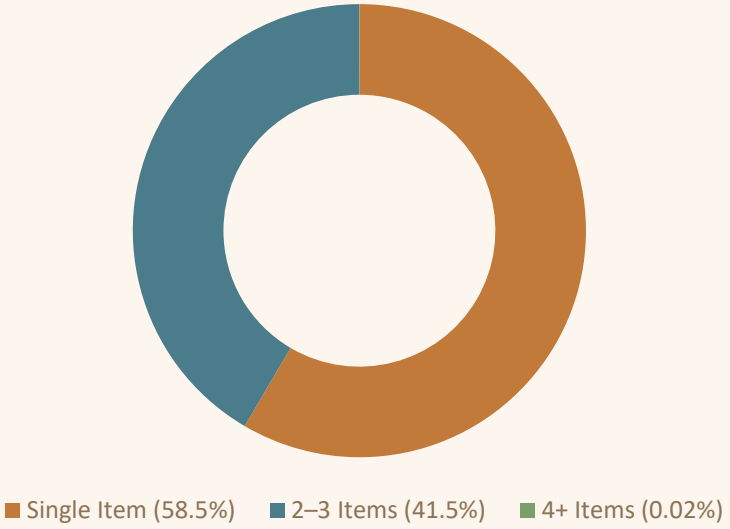
Purchase Size Distribution



Opportunity: The R5–R6.99 band is almost empty (133 units). Introducing 2–3 premium products in this range could capture spend between the mid-tier and high-end categories without cannibalising existing sales.

Strategic Recommendations

BY

ERROL MATSWIKI

01

Double down on mornings

55% of revenue comes before noon. Extend morning promotions and ensure full staffing from 8–11am across all locations.

02

Fill the R5–R7 price gap

Only 133 units were sold in the R5–R6.99 range. Introducing 2–3 premium products here could meaningfully increase average order value.

03

Reformat bottom-5 products

Dark Choc, Earl Grey and Spicy Chai underperform as small sizes. Offer large-format versions as already proven by top sellers.

04

Weekend traffic campaigns

Weekends drive only 28% of revenue despite 2 full days. Targeted promotions (brunch combos, loyalty events) could close the gap.
